

Peter Routsolias

Senior Vice President, Logistics

Peter Routsolias was named senior vice president, Logistics, in January 2025, a role he had acted in since June 2024. He reports to the chief logistics and infrastructure officer and executive vice president.

In this role, Routsolias is responsible for the operation of the Postal Service's world-class logistics network, and drives cost reductions and service-enhancing processes, performance and strategy within the transportation and logistics teams. He also leads the organization's redesign of the surface transportation network and improvement of carrier management by using the new, state-of-the-art logistics platform.

Before, Routsolias served as vice president, Transportation Strategy where he led the strategic design of a world-class transportation network and was responsible for developing cost- and service-enhancing processes that optimized delivery and sortation operations throughout Postal Service plants.

An international logistics and operations executive with more than 25 years of experience, Routsolias has successfully managed multimillion dollar supply chains, creating and implementing new business processes, and developing effective strategic plans. He has served as senior vice president, transportation, at Ashley Distribution Services; vice president, transportation, at Univar Solutions; and vice president, transportation and network planning at XPO Logistics. He has also held director and executive-level positions at Schneider Logistics, Exel Logistics, DSC Logistics and Roadway Express.

Routsolias holds a bachelor's degree in management from Indiana University, and a Master of Business Administration from Purdue University in Indiana.
